The Phenomenology of Group Stalking ('Gang-Stalking'): A Content Analysis of Subjective Experiences

Lorraine Sheridan,^{1,*} David V. James,² and Jayden Roth¹

A factor that stands out in the current study concerns the aggression with which sufferers responded to their experiences (see Table 2). Of respondents, 32% described experiences falling into the category "determined to fight back", while 16% made statements that fell into the category "development of hatred/violent tendencies". Examples include: "We can either go out on our feet or our knees and I plan to sell myself for as high a price as I can reap from them"; "I may have to kill them before they kill me"; and "I think the only way forward is to get some weapons and act". Violence in those who have complained of gang-stalking is not unknown. Sarteschi [21] described the cases of four men who believed that they were so-called "targeted individuals" and that the organised efforts of those who targeted them constituted "gang-stalking". Collectively, the four men killed 28 people and injured 12 more. Sarteschi points to a need for intervention to prevent violent responses, and notes that the men whose cases were detailed in her study had engaged in significant efforts to make others aware of their perceived victimisation, these efforts taking the form of manifestos, videos and audio recordings, and social media posts. The violence perpetrated by these men was motivated by self-defence (in the form of a pre-emptive strike) and a need to alert the world at large to the dangers posed by gang-stalking. Serious violence appears to be rare in those experiencing gang-stalking phenomena. However, it is of note that the experiences grouped above under "invasive attack on the subject's body" constitute examples of threat-control-override symptoms, which have been linked with an increased risk of violence [32,33]. It is also noted that the experiences and quotes above would satisfy criteria for the red-flag violence risk items of "homicidal ideation" and "high-risk phenomena" in the stalking and threat risk assessment guides the Stalking Risk Profile [34] and the Communications Threat Assessment Protocol [35].

Go to:

5. Conclusions

The experience of being gang-stalked appears to be a widespread phenomenon that has been subject to little scientific examination. The current study provides a preliminary description of the phenomena involved that was produced by a methodology that did not incorporate pre-conceived assumptions. This provides a foundation upon which further research could be built. It also serves to confirm the harmful effects of the gang-stalking experience upon sufferers, first set out in the only other study available [5]. These findings constitute a potent reason why gang-stalking should be regarded as an important subject for study.

Whilst it was important to adopt a methodology that allowed the phenomena constituting the experience of gang-stalking to emerge de novo, it would now be appropriate to conduct studies of cases based upon specific questions in order to gain a clearer idea of the proportion of sufferers who experience each category of phenomenon, as the main categories have now been elucidated and the core phenomena described. This is because higher proportions are likely to be elicited through direct questioning than were found by studying internet descriptions. Finally, whilst this study has described the core phenomena of the gang-stalking experience, the question remains as to whether gang-stalking is a single phenomenon or represents several overlapping phenomena, each with its own defining pattern of experiences.

How To Get Your Head Out Of Your Ass & Be A Decent Person

Sometimes we give people the wrong impression of ourselves without even knowing it. You might consider yourself to be friendly and outgoing, but you could actually be coming across as a douchebag. So how do you change others' perception of you? Well, get your head out of your ass and just be nice. It's easy to do, but in case there's any confusion, here are some tips.

Worried About Swearing Too Much? Science Says You Shouldn't Be

People who swear like a sailor are more honest and more intelligent, studies show.

Well, damn. Maybe you stubbed your toe first thing in the morning. Or some thoughtless commuter forced you to slam the brakes on the drive to work. Perhaps just fed up with it all and feel like sinking to your knees and cursing the heavens.

If you've ever suppressed the urge to unleash a string of obscenities, maybe think again. Some research suggests that it might be a better idea to simply let Scientifically speaking, a penchant for profanity doesn't seem to be such a bad thing. Studies have shown that swearing relieves stress, dulls the sensation, fosters camaraderie among peers and is linked with traits like verbal fluency, openness and honesty.

[BUT OF COURSE] : But Law Enforcement Sure Abuses This Concept! We have a conspiracy here -- to support the haters in our culture by law enforcement and civil society -- we have a problem addressing hate in this country!

I am very disturbed by the news this evening in the plot to take over the STATE GOVERNMENT of MICHIGAN.

Are We Really Serious In That Assessment? Of course, we are. In all aspects, it seems very off the wall goal and how one might actually think they could implement such actions and succeed. Not me.

If most of this nation who are not clued into and making the truisms state of hate in this nation,

A bunch of crazy people who got caught -- no way that such things are born of seriousness. But they actually are.

Answer me -- that is the real delusion -- the dismissal that what was there and still is building and manifesting here in this country is more dangerous than the massive majority of good peoples in this nation might want to see.

There is more here than meets the eyes to most. There is more here than meets the eyes to law enforcement, I bet.

On The Pulse Of Morning

Poem by Maya Angelou

A Rock, A River, A Tree

Hosts to species long since departed,

Mark the mastodon.

The dinosaur, who left dry tokens
 Of their sojourn here
 On our planet floor,
 Any broad alarm of their of their hastening doom
 Is lost in the gloom of dust and ages.
 But today, the Rock cries out to us, clearly, forcefully,
 Come, you may stand upon my
 Back and face your distant destiny,
 But seek no haven in my shadow.
 I will give you no hiding place down here.
 You, created only a little lower than
 The angels, have crouched too long in
 The bruising darkness,
 Have lain too long
 Face down in ignorance.
 Your mouths spelling words
 Armed for slaughter.
 The rock cries out today, you may stand on me,
 But do not hide your face.
 Across the wall of the world,
 A river sings a beautiful song,
 Come rest here by my side.
 Each of you a bordered country,
 Delicate and strangely made proud,
 Yet thrusting perpetually under siege.
 Your armed struggles for profit
 Have left collars of waste upon
 My shore, currents of debris upon my breast.
 Yet, today I call you to my riverside,
 If you will study war no more.
 Come, clad in peace and I will sing the songs
 The Creator gave to me when I
 And the tree and stone were one.
 Before cynicism was a bloody sear across your brow
 And when you yet knew you still knew nothing,
 The river sings and sings on.
 There is a true yearning to respond to
 The singing river and the wise rock.
 So say the Asian, the Hispanic, the Jew,
 The African and Native American, the Sioux,
 The Catholic, the Muslim, the French, the Greek,
 The Irish, the Rabbi, the Priest, the Sheikh,
 The Gay, the Straight, the Preacher,
 The privileged, the homeless, the teacher.
 They hear. They all hear
 The speaking of the tree.
 Today, the first and last of every tree
 Speaks to humankind. Come to me, here beside the river.
 Plant yourself beside me, here beside the river.
 Each of you, descendant of some passed on
 Traveller, has been paid for.
 You, who gave me my first name,
 You Pawnee, Apache and Seneca,
 You Cherokee Nation, who rested with me,
 Then forced on bloody feet,
 Left me to the employment of other seekers-
 Desperate for gain, starving for gold.
 You, the Turk, the Swede, the German, the Scot...
 You the Ashanti, the Yoruba, the Kru,
 Bought, sold, stolen, arriving on a nightmare
 Praying for a dream.
 Here, root yourselves beside me.
 I am the tree planted by the river,
 Which will not be moved.
 I, the rock, I the river, I the tree
 I am yours- your passages have been paid.
 Lift up your faces, you have a piercing need
 For this bright morning dawning for you.
 History, despite its wrenching pain,
 Cannot be unlived, and if faced with courage,
 Need not be lived again.
 Lift up your eyes upon
 The day breaking for you.
 Give birth again
 To the dream.
 Women, children, men,
 Take it into the palms of your hands.

Mold it into the shape of your most Private need. Sculpt it into
 The image of your most public self.
 Lift up your hearts.
 Each new hour holds new chances
 For new beginnings.
 Do not be wedded forever
 To fear, yoked eternally
 To brutishness.
 The horizon leans forward,
 Offering you space to place new steps of change.
 Here, on the pulse of this fine day
 You may have the courage
 To look up and out upon me,
 The rock, the river, the tree, your country.
 No less to Midas than the mendicant.
 No less to you now than the mastodon then.
 Here on the pulse of this new day
 You may have the grace to look up and out
 And into your sister's eyes,
 Into your brother's face, your country
 And say simply
 Very simply
 With hope
 Good morning.
